124 One day, at the sight of a freshly cleared field on the 423 highest mountain slopes, I asked a Paez working there to whom this land belonged and whether the person concerned had always owned it. He answered that he himself was the owner and that previously the parcel had been ownerless. He said that he had cleared it for himself and only recently built his house here in order to live here. In answer to my question as to whether there was any more ownerless land, he explained to me that the highest and inaccessible mountain peaks which are still covered with big trees and have never been cleared do not belong to anyone and that any Paez could clear a piece on them, which would then become his property. Later I called Victoriano to task, saying that actually there still was ownerless land. "Yes," he then answered me, "of course there is still ownerless land, but it is so poor that it has no value."

157 Far from their village, on the way to market, and [123] generally in /110/ places away from home, the Paez, if they [522] are alone or in the minority, are timid and reserved. If they are together in large numbers, however, or, even better, in their own house, they are usually quite bold and impudent and 157 loudly made their jokes at our expense. Indeed, jocularity is a 521 prominent characteristic of the Paez. No talk, no conversation, 522 be it ever so unimportant, is begun without joking -- often of [831] an erotic nature. The importance of conducting such a light, idle conversation is shown by the fact that serious-minded girls are scarcely ever married.

123 They made fun of my wife in particular, for they found
522 it altogether ugly that she wore long pants. Numerous jokes
157 were made about this, which we, of course, did not understand, and for this reason we, in turn, had to take the initiative by making a joke which was then acknowledged gratefully and usually 609 with quick-wittedness. On the whole, respect toward strangers
522 inside their dwelling is unknown to them. In larger groups they 159 make their asides even in a strange environment, accompanied by much laughter. Since one does not understand them, one
[197] easily gets the impression that they are silly. In their own houses they also mimic the visiting mission priest by repeating

571 whatever he expects and claims for himself, quite as a matter of 829 course. This results in an entirely natural self-esteem, injury to 155 which on the part of the "blancos" is felt as very painful by the Paez.

576 Within the Paez communities the obligation of a greeting (gwéčaya) by a younger person to an older one is strictly observed. Even a "family feud" does not absolve the younger people from the respectful greeting "pétenga" (translated by "good day") toward the older people of other families, who acknowledge it with "pé'taw." Removing one's hat at the same time is not customary.

[608] A greeting by shaking hands takes place only among members of the family or with one's godfather or godmother with the salutation "ndyósta utsménga" (Godparent, how are you?), during which the hat is also removed. Contemporaries greet each other with

• [521] "éwča" (how are you) and reply with "éwčataw" (I am well). Generally people chat awhile when they meet, introduce the conversation with a joke, a bit of news in the village, or perhaps merely a remark about the weather.

156 Though the Paez may be regarded basically as an individualist, this does not hold true universally. On account of the abundantly available land, it is possible for him to isolate himself and withdraw for weeks at a time to his separate farm, but 461 nonetheless the Paez does not like to drink his chicha alone. And 476 usually friends and neighbors help, not only with housebuilding or 156 clearing, but also with sowing and lesser tasks. The labor of the individual, in instances of mutual help, is merely loaned, however, since the same persons meet again for joint aid on the corresponding tasks of a neighbor. The owner in question must also make chicha and food liberally available for each task, which makes every joint task a small feast. The actual useful effects of the communal work are slight, and, as a visitor from the outside, one has the impression that the joint eating and drinking is the primary thing, interrupted at times by only brief periods of work. On sober consideration -- which no Paez, of course, undertakes -- the joint consumption in connection with a communal task is more expensive for the individual than if each person himself over a correspondingly

4. Music

533 In no area of Paez culture is poverty evident to such an ex-
535 tent as in song and dance, the predominant expressions of the character and spirit of all peoples. No peculiar dance is per-[173] formed among the /288/ Paez, and I heard no song sung. This undoubtedly represents an impoverishment, for it may be seen
533 from the folklore that in former times there was dancing. A similar conclusion must also be drawn about the playing of very [173] agreeable music. Their knowledge of music, however, makes it
[181] highly probable that song also existed, especially among a people
[581 that is basically jolly and constantly disposed to jest. In fact, 521 it is very difficult for a girl who is slow in jocular conversation to 522 get a husband. And to my question about the Paez word for "sing
192] house" listed in Uricoechea, the amiable Victoriano, to his own great surprise, was immediately able to give me a special word in his language, "mémyat."

534 It is not possible to say with certainty which of the musical [171] instruments used by the Paez today is an original one. The absence of any kind of rattle, the outstanding instrument of the American natives, is surprising (*).

> * Pittier de Fábrega (p. 325) /see the bibliography in the foreign text, p. 326/, however, mentions among the musical instruments of the Paez a rattle (tsoóts) in the form of a calabash with a handle, which was filled with small stones. Whether this may not perhaps be an instrument of the Negroes of Belalcázar is still undecided.

534 The cow horn (kǎčn) found in every house is not in the true
202 sense a musical instrument, but one for signaling. It is completely undecorated and, consisting of a horn sawed off at the tip, gives only one tone, which is produced in the same manner as the tone of a bugle or fanfare. This horn is used by the men when they come down from the mountains after a joint felling of the trees needed for housebuilding, in order to notify the village of their return.
